DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Arrow Rock today has a small (81) and dwindling population. Most of its structures are either incorporated into Arrow Rock State Park or administered by the Friends of Arrow Rock, incorporated in 1959. Points of interest include: The Old Tavern built in 1834 by Judge Joseph Huston, one of the original town commissioners, who had been born in Philadelphia, and moved to Saline County in 1819. The Tavern (originally called the City Hotel) is a two-and-a-half story brick structure, to which Huston added about 1840 a store with a second-floor ballroom. The latter still retains its unusual stenciled wall decoration. The Tavern is operated by the Missouri Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, and is furnished in Period antiques.

The Arrow Rock Academy Boarding House, a frame structure built about 1843 which housed a succession of girls' schools until long after the Civil War. Now the residence of the Park superintendent.

The Arrow Rock Jail. A small stone building with wrought iron door, built in 1871.

A wing of the George Caleb Bingham House, constructed by Missouri's artist of the frontier in 1837. Bingham sold the property in 1845.

The Dr. Matthew Walton Hall House, a one-and-a-half story brick house, constructed about 1845, and owned at an early date by one of the pioneer physicians of Saline County. Now used as headquarters for the Missouri Society, Daughters of the American Revolution.

The Arrow Rock Town Spring, in the valley below the town, near the former road leading from the river landing into the town.

Early Historic Quarry, in the southeast corner of the park.

The Old Court House, a two-room log structure, with woodwork and clapboarding dating from about 1830, which according to tradition served as the temporary Court House of Saline County, 1839-40.

Dr. Charles M. Bradford House. Original frame portion built between 1831-1841 by William G. Miller. Additions were made to the house by Dr. Bradford following his purchase of the property in 1841. Dr. Bradford, a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania came to Arrow Rock in 1840, where he married Miss Lavinia Pearson, a granddaughter of Dr. John Sappington. The house is now owned by Mr. and Mrs. William H. Miller, who operate an antique shop.

Dr. William Price House. Dr. Price, a native of Maryland, began the practice of medicine in Arrow Rock, September 24, 1835. He married Mary Ellen Sappington, a daughter of Dr. John Sappington. He built this handsome brick house about 1838. Part of the early and perhaps original wooden fence, of ornamental design, remains along the back yard. Now owned by Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Argubright.

CONTINUATION SHEET Arrow Rock
Description ITEM NUMBER 7 PAGE 2

The Arrow Rock Baptist Church, located near the Bingham House, is now used as a summer repertory theater called the Arrow Rock Lyceum. The theater opens on July 4th for an eight-week season annually.

Doctors' House, so called for the many physicians who resided there in the 19th and early 20th centuries, is now owned by Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Williams and in the tradition of the early dress-makers, now houses the firm of Page One Fashions, a custom dress-making establishment.

The Black Sheep Inn, located in an ante-bellum house on the outskirts of the village, is a fine restaurant, open daily except Tuesdays and caters to parties. Owned and operated by Mr. Taylor Williams and Mr. Jay Turley.

John P. Sites Sunshop and Home. Sites, a native of Virginia, who learned the trade of gunsmith at Boonville, moved to Arrow Rock in 1844 where he lived until his death in 1904. His rifles were popular throughout Central Missouri. His two-story brick shop adjoins his red brick home, both dating from 1866.

Arrow Rock Friendship Lodge No. 40, I.O.O.F. Hall. Built 1868, with lodge rooms on the second floor. The first floor was originally occupied by a newspaper office, where the Saline County Herald was published.

Arrow Rock Lodge No. 55, A.F. & A.M. This lodge was formed in 1842. In 1868 they constructed this brick building with their hall on the second floor, and the first floor rented for commercial purposes. The first floor is presently used by the Arrow Rock Craft Club, an organization which sells only hand-made articles and homemade jams and jellies and pickles as well as cakes, pies and bread.

The Cumberland Presbyterian Church. Built in 1857, now owned by the congregation of Zion Evangelical and Reformed Church of Arrow Rock.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Arrow Rock, the starting point for the traders from Old Franklin and Boon's Lick who opened the Santa Fe Trail, commemorates the beginning of the Santa Fe trade.

The Missouri River crossing at Arrow Rock figured prominently in the very early trail-breaking expeditions that opened the West. Traffic was so great that by 1817 a ferry crossed the river there. Two years later a road was laid out from the ferry to Cooper's Fort. This road was later incorporated into the post road from Arrow Rock to Fort Osage, and became the great thoroughfare of early traders.

Both of the pioneering Becknell expeditions in 1821 and 1822 were organized at Arrow Rock. Here other major caravans of the early 1820's, including the important one led by Captain William Becknell in 1821, assembled and prepared for the long journey to Santa Fe.

The rock cliff of Arrow Rock, remains of the old Ferry Road, and the Santa Fe Spring used by those who rendezvoused there in the early days of the Santa Fe Trail are preserved in Arrow Rock State Park. The park adjoins the town of Arrow Rock, which was associated with the later trail days. The town preserves many structures having historical and cultural association of later periods and presents a charming and almost unique picture of mid-19th century frontier village-town architecture and atmosphere of the Mississippi-Missouri valley region.

An elaborate Square bay has been added to the E facade, probably dating to the 1890's by is Queen Ann/Eastlake styling. It has a flat roof and two windows facing E., and attenuated windows on the sides with panels below. Applied decoration includes an undulating motif at the dentil band, brackets, and a paneled frieze. Other window and door openings are trabeated; the entrance having a transom. There is a raking cornice at the eaves. Paint scrappings were sent to Pratt and Lambert and the original colors have been used again to restore the building, though not always in their original places.

VERBAL BOUNDARY DESCRIPTION:

dows and the transom and sidelights of the two doors on the main facade are intact. The original two story ell to the NE has also been removed and replaced by a 1 story ell. The interior has not been carefully restored, the mantels no longer exist, except in one upstairs room (W). The original wide board floors do remain in the 2nd story; they sag quite visibly, due to the storage of wheat in these rooms (oral history). According to oral history the timbers for the structure were floated down the MO River to a point 1 mile E of the house.

Illustrated Atlas, 1876, shows Burrill Thompson Residence - with 2 story central pavilion + 2 story ell. Also shows numerous outbuildings.

A DAR marker is in the front yard to mark the Sante Fe trail, which reportedly ran to the N of the residence.

Within the boundaries there is only one outbuilding, a small board and batten smoke house on stone piers and having a pyramidal roof. It sits to the N of the residence.

43 History and Significance Despite its poor conditions, both interior and exterior, the residence is restorable. It is a prime example of the standard form of housing used in this area; and a rare example of one which retains its architectural integrity, with out new siding, and asphalt roof, etc. Since the last resident and the property owners are black, it could possibly offer historical information to their culture in Arrow Rock.		32.
